Response to Amendment

The following is in response to the amendment filed on August 29, 2003.

Claims 1-45 are allowed.

Reasons for Allowance

The following is a statement of reasons for allowance:

Claims 1-14 are allowed, because the prior art does not disclose a shoe press comprising at least a belt that includes an embedded communications cable having sensors configured to respond to an operating parameter of the shoe press.

Claims 15-45 are allowable because they recite belts including at least an embedded communications cable extending within the belt thickness and having sensors configured to detect an operating parameter of a shoe press. The claimed belt is not considered to be obvious in view of the conveyor belts cited herein, as the sensors embedded within these prior art conveyor belts are constructed and configured differently. The sensors in the prior art belts detect an operating condition of the belt (such as its velocity or the presence of a rip) and are not suitable for detecting a condition of a shoe press (such as nip pressure). Also, the sensors in the prior art conveyor belts communicate information independently rather than being connected to one another through a communications cable.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to the rejection of claims 1-30 under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) over Meschenmoser et al (US 6,306,261) in view of Moore (US 5,953,230) and Eagles et al (US 6,158,576) presented previously are persuasive. This rejection has been withdrawn in view of the arguments and amendments to the claims.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Whiteley (AU 2000 22299) discloses a longitudinal rip detector for a conveyor belt comprising an imbedded circuit disposed across the width of the belt.

Pramila et al (US 6,524,229) discloses a composite roll having a helical reinforcing optical fiber for sensing a load on the roll.

Hutchins (US 6,264,577) discloses a conveyor belt having an embedded integrated circuit transponder for detecting and communicating the condition of the belt during operation.

Moschel (US 5,592,875) discloses a press roll with a helical sensor disposed about the roll and beneath the roll cover for determining a nip pressure distribution.

Laitenen (US 5,383,371) discloses a device for measuring press nip force comprising a series of measurement detectors placed across the width of a press roll or press band.

Houck et al (US 4,646,912) discloses a conveyor belt with embedded antennae for detecting a break or rip in the belt.

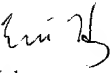

Kunkle (US 4,016,756) discloses a nip loading device comprising a series of spaced sensors disposed on a thin load sensing bar.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
